UC COVID-19 studies awarded $425K.
With financial support from the UC Office of Research directed by Dr. Pat Limbach and the College of Medicine Office of Research, we were able fund 11 UC COVID-19 research studies through a program titled “The Special Coronavirus (COVID-19) Research Pilot Grant Program”. In total the University of Cincinnati invested $425k into these research projects. WLWT also covered this story: https://www.wlwt.com/article/uc-college-of-medicine-on前线-covid-19-research/32172419. 2021 Searle Scholars Program.
The 2021 Searle Scholars Program is an opportunity for assistant professors in biochemistry, cell biology, genetics, immunology, neuroscience, pharmacology, and related areas in chemistry, medicine, and the biological sciences. The College of Medicine is conducting an internal competition to identify one candidate who will move forward to the final competition managed by UC OoR. Interested applicants should submit a letter of support from the department chair, one page abstract of their research proposal, and updated curriculum vitae to sheehabe@uc.edu by 8am on Friday, May 8, 2020. Reminder: CoM Research Innovation/Pilot Grant Program applications due Wednesday.
The NON-COVID-19 Research Innovation/Pilot Grant Program applications are due on Wednesday, April 22, 2020. This program was established to assist College of Medicine faculty with generating preliminary data necessary to develop highly competitive NIH or other grant applications, or to take their research in a new direction. For more information, review the RFA.

In this seminar faculty will gain a better understanding of “Team Science” - the study and application of principles, techniques, and strategies in order to form, develop, lead, and manage groups of individuals who are a part of a research project or team. Jack Kues, PhD, Associate Dean for Continous Professional Development, Professor Emeritus of Family Medicine will be the presenter. The seminar is scheduled for Friday, April 29, 2020 from 11:30am-1:00pm. New and continuing faculty researchers, postdocs and administrators are encouraged to attend. Register today!
